Satisfy your hunger for mac 'n' cheese with new recipes all week at Mac Madness. Entree portions cost $12. On Monday, try the classic dish with tuna, peas and a garlic-bread crumb crust. 5 p.m. Through Friday.

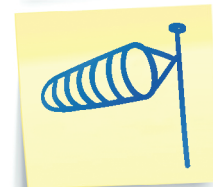

A new size for RedEye

Dear readers,
If your paper seems a little bit different today, it's because it is. We've converted to a new, more compact page size, one that has been adopted by all the Tribune Media Group papers.

Think of it as the South Beach Diet for newspapers. Though you'll see some minor tweaks (headlines and photos are a tad smaller), our design and content—including the body type we use in stories—remain the same. In short: same RedEye goodness, slightly smaller package.

As always, we welcome feedback at ritaredeye@tribune.com. Thank you for reading RedEye. We appreciate you.

PRESIDENT POISED TO SIGN SWEEPING HEALTH CARE BILL

How did Illinois vote?

WASHINGTON U.S. Rep. Dan Lipinski of Western Springs was the only House Democrat from Illinois to break ranks with the president and party in opposing a landmark health-care reform bill Sunday. Eleven other House Democrats from Illinois favored the historic bill that proponents said would extend health insurance to 32 million Americans.

All seven House Republicans from Illinois were in opposition. Lipinski, 43, who is serving his third term in Congress, had pledged a "no" vote if the measure included provisions that he believes will provide funding for abortions. He did not take part in a press conference Sunday in which the leading anti-abortion Democrat, Bart Stupak of Michigan, announced a compromise that allowed Stupak and some other abortion opponents to sign off on the legislation.

CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Chicago Tribune

Delivering a hard-fought victory in President Obama's year-long pursuit of a national health care overhaul, a divided House on Sunday night narrowly approved legislation that both supporters and opponents call historic in its sweep.

The House's 219-212 vote on a Senate-passed bill will deliver to the president's desk an initiative for which he has fought on Capitol Hill and campaigned across the country: A health care bill that he finally can sign. Thirty-four members of the president's party joined all the House's Republicans in voting against the health care bill.

The House then approved, by a vote of 220-211, a package designed to reconcile differences between the Senate-and-House-approved bill and another that the House already had approved in November.

Together, the two measures would present the president with a long-sought triumph for the signature domestic agenda of his presidency, a bid to offer health insurance to an estimated 32 million Americans who are uninsured and improve the coverage of those with insurance.

The second measure still must go to the Senate, where leaders hope to approve it by a simple

'BABY KILLER' CONTROVERSY

The final obstacle to the bill's passage was cleared Sunday when President Obama and Democratic leaders reached a compromise with anti-abortion lawmakers, including Rep. Bart Stupak of Michigan and a handful of others.

Republican abortion foes said Obama's proposed order was insufficient, and when Stupak sought to counter them, a shout of "baby killer" could be heard coming from the Republican side of the chamber. — AP majority vote under a process of "budget reconciliation." Any changes made in the Senate, however, would return that to the House before the president signs it.

"I know this bill is complicated, but it's also very simple," said House Majority Leader Steny Hoyer (D-Md.) during the final debate. "Illness and infirmity are universal, but we are stronger against them together than we are alone. ... In that shared strength is our nation's strength."

The bill has an estimated cost of $940 billion over 10 years and is supported in part by additional taxes on the wealthiest Americans.

Need a parking spot? There's an app for that Chicago has a problem. A parking problem. Meters are more expensive than lattes, and garages can fill up fast.

Enter Nick Capizzani, a 23-year-old Purdue University student from Plainfield with a solution—or at the very least, a really good start.

Capizzani is the developer and brains behind Chicago Parking, a $1.99 iPhone app that helps locate nearby parking garages and shows you how much it costs to park there. And then there are the awesome bonuses, such as a map that shows meter parking rates across the city, a timer so you don't forget to feed the meter and a parking reminder so you don't forget where you left your wheels.

"I saw a need for this app because I wanted to create a useful app for Chicago to help them save money," Capizzani told me in an e-mail. He explained that the idea was born because he and his girlfriend often would drive to Chicago and never would know where to park. He said he ended up parking at the closest garage, but that it usually turned out to be the most expensive.

As impressive as this app is, what impressed me even more is Capizzani's awareness and attention to social media and the importance of listening to users.

There's a Facebook page with a discussion board for people to talk to each other about their parking experiences and about the app. Capizzani also connects with and talks to users via Twitter and Facebook.

"Social networking is key for me, so everyday I try to focus on new ways to draw in people, he said. "The whole goal is to make a brand."

Capizzani says he'll use his social-networking prowess to collect feedback on the app and make changes based on suggestions if they make sense. He's even thinking about extending the brand beyond iPhone to a Facebook application or a BlackBerry version.

In future iPhone versions of Chicago Parking, Capizzani says he plans to have a comment page where people can review parking garages and meters and share their opinions with other users and friends via Facebook and Twitter.

And, Capizzani says he's got his eye on working with garages to keep the data as up to date as possible. There's a button built right into the app that downloads new garage data when available, so if rates change unexpectedly, users would know almost immediately.

What's your secret to finding a parking spot in Chicago? Willing to share? Tweet me, poke me, friend me—just tell me. I charge only $8 for the first hour.

Unhappy with your day job? Some Chicagoans have found the secret to busting into a new career

By Christopher Boyce

FOR REDEYE

Brooks Geenen does some of his best work under the cover of darkness.

By day, the Ravenswood resident slogs through 40 hours a week making lattes and fixing bagels at an Internet cafe in DePaul's Student Center in Lincoln Park.

But at night, he transforms into a freelance video editor and musician who toils at his craft until the wee hours of the morning.

It's no passing hobby. Geenen, 23, has produced several music videos for local artists and released a folk rock album—sacrificing sleep in order to do what he truly loves.

"Working at a cafe and not contributing to something creative—it makes it 10 times better, because you have something to compare it to," Geenen said.

While many workers might be content with earning a regular paycheck at a job they don't love, some Chicagoans are creating career alter egos, building parallel professional lives with the intention of one day making the leap to a job about which they are passionate.

For Geenan, hating his day job makes him appreciate video production even more.

"By doing something like that every day, you realize it when you do have a good job," he said.

Job dissatisfaction isn't limited to deli employees. About 61 percent of Chicago workers ages 18 to 35 admitted daydreaming about better jobs while at work, according to a study released in January by Everest College.

Nationally, just 36 percent of people under age 25 are satisfied with their jobs, according to a survey released in January by The Conference Board, a New York-based association that analyzes business management and the economy. That's down from 56 percent in 1987.

Among people ages 25 to 34, only 47 percent said they are satisfied with their jobs, down from 60 percent in 1987. Both figures are new lows for the survey's 22-year run.

None of those figures surprises Jeff Jarmes, president of Everest College's Chicago campus in the Loop.

"A lot of students think they're going to leave college and have these great jobs off the bat and it's not happening as quick, so disappointment occurs relatively fast," Jarmes said. That doesn't necessarily mean they're bitter. Although nearly half of participants in Everest's study said their jobs were unfulfilling, about 74 percent also said they cared about the business success of their employers.

Jeff Miller, 24, likes his job as a morning radio producer for "DreX in the Morning" on KISS-FM 103.5—just not as much as his preferred career as a screenwriter.

Miller, a Columbia College graduate, said he knows his radio gig would be a dream job for many, and added he loves being part of a popular radio show. But the Evergreen Park resident said if Hollywood calls, he's out.

"I don't hate it," Miller said. "I wake up at 4 a.m. and it sucks getting up that early—it sucks really bad. But when I get in the car, I'm excited."

After his shift ends around 10 a.m., Miller heads home to work on the script he and a friend are developing for a TV show. Like most who try to break into show business, Miller is writing on his own time, but he's already met with two networks that have expressed interest, he said.

While that's motivation for Miller to continue sacrificing time he could be spending playing in the city, for others, it's easy to end up feeling lost and unmotivated when a job that once seemed perfect doesn't pan out, said Brandon Sammut, co-founder of Dream Job Chicago.

Seeing an opportunity to serve workers whose "shotgun approach" to employment has left them feeling trapped, Sammut created this free support group that discourages traditional networking, which he said encompasses superficial relationships between people who never really get to know each other. Instead, Sammut pushes unhappy workers to

Finding the right job for you

The national unemployment rate was at 9.7 percent in February, but career experts say that's no reason to get complacent with a bad job. Brandon Sammut, a professional recruiter and co-founder of Dream Job Chicago, a job search program that emphasizes building meaningful public relationships through resume drops and traditional networking, offers these four tips to finding your employment nirvana. c.b.

1 Don't network—build relationships

Research people who are doing the job you want and arrange to meet them. But treat it as a two-way conversation, not an interview. Try to understand what makes them tick, and be prepared to share what interests you about their field. Then ask yourself: how would I do in their shoes?

Do you need a career transplant?

Sometimes it's hard to diagnose your own professional problems, but we don't mind pointing them out. If you identify with more than three symptoms on Red-Eye's less-than-scientific list of troubling work behaviors, it might be time for you to consider consulting the professionals about a new career. C.B.

» You paid for a Smart phone to pass the time on Facebook mobile.

» You go to the bathroom at the same times every day, regardless of actual need.

» Your most exciting moments at work are when you almost get caught searching job sites.

» Weekends are spent researching minimally painful diseases you could acquire to qualify for disability pay.

» You finish projects without any recollection of having done them.

» Lunch conversations often devolve into arguments about the best Excel shortcuts.

» You've surpassed Level 20 on the Brick-Breaker game for BlackBerry.

» You run an office pool that bets on the number of times your boss will say "performance management" and "synergy" during staff meetings.

form deeper connections with smaller groups that include fellow job seekers and people in the jobs to which they aspire.

One believer of this approach is Tess Waechter, 24, of Logan Square. Before discovering her true passion, Waechter spent about 18 months toiling for a nonprofit long-term home for troubled youths.

"It's a great organization," Waechter said. "It just wasn't where my passions were or what I was excited about." After talking it out with others in the same situation, Waechter realized she wanted to combine the socially conscious aspect of her nonprofit job with something in the food industry.

It sounds like an impossible combination, but in October, Dream Job helped Waechter score a volunteer role with Sweet Miss Giving's Bakery and Gifting, a bakery and jobs program that supports formerly homeless Chicagoans and those with HIV and AIDS.

Waechter volunteered her time twice weekly in addition to her day job, and after three months she accepted a full-time job as logistics manager.

The secret to finding career satisfaction, Waechter said, was daydreaming aloud. "The more you verbalize what your dream job is, the more other people will know where your passions are," she said. "It helps you strengthen your self-awareness and makes you know what you want to do."

CHRISTOPHER BOYCE IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

2 Dare to dream out loud

Talk to others about your professional passions and what jobs you'd love to have. It will help you envision ways to get there.

3 Swallow your pride

Work for cheap or free. Consider volunteering, internships or apprenticeships. It's a great way to ensure your dream job isn't actually a nightmare.

4 Lose sleep over it

Of course you have bills to pay, but find ways you can work evenings or weekends to get your foot in the door at a job you might like.

Drivers heading toward downtown Chicago from the west soon will encounter road construction everywhere they turn, and even where they don't turn.

A quadruple dose of traffic jams, lane reductions, closed streets and zigzagging detours is inevitable beginning in early April, and it's all building toward creating a chokepoint at a key gateway to the central business district.

The worst of the congestion is expected on the Eisenhower Expressway, which will be resurfaced over a 27-mile stretch; on the adjoining Congress Parkway, involving a rehabilitation of the bridge over the Chicago River as well as a street beautification project extending to Michigan Avenue; and on the north-south portion of Wacker Drive, both levels of which will be demolished and rebuilt from Congress to Randolph Street.

The construction dust finally will settle at the end of 2012.

Never in recent memory has so much work been focused on the congested downtown

CONSTRUCTION HIGHLIGHTS:

Eisenhower Expressway

Work is scheduled to start about April 1 to resurface the chronically congested Eisenhower from Thorndale Avenue to the Circle Interchange at the entry to downtown. Work on the Eisenhower will begin on the west end of the expressway at Thorndale, but it will affect both directions simultaneously, said Jacek Tyszkiewicz, project implementation engineer with the Illinois Department of Transportation.

Asked if he recommends that downtown-bound drivers traveling inbound on the Eisenhower cut over to the Kennedy Expressway and then enter the business district, Tyszkiewicz said: "Listen to the radio on your way in, then pick your poison."

But the best bet, officials said, is for drivers to consider riding mass transit during the Eisenhower project. Three Metra commuter lines operate near the I-290 corridor to the Loop—the Union Pacific West, Milwaukee District West and Burlington Northern Santa Fe. The CTA's Blue, Green and Pink Lines are also alternatives, as are Pace buses.

area, affecting hundreds of thousands of motorists and pedestrians, including Metra and Amtrak riders walking around Union Station and the Ogilvie Transportation Center.

Congress Parkway bridge

Also about April 1, at the terminus of the Eisenhower near the old post office building, one-half of the Congress Parkway bridge will be closed for a major rehab. All traffic, eastbound and westbound, will initially be shifted to the westbound side while crews renovate the eastbound side of the structurally deficient bridge built in 1956. Traffic will be switched to the other side in 2011 for the duration of the project, IDOT officials said.

Congress Parkway streetscape

The city will update the Congress corridor, from Wells Street to Michigan Avenue, to provide a more pedestrian- and bicyclist-friendly environment, officials said. Improvements include street resurfacing, new wider sidewalks, bathtub planters in the median and at curbside, decorative high-intensity lighting and interconnected traffic signals to help traffic flow, officials said.

Authorities defend their decision, saying that instead of enduring a decade of projects conducted back to back, this way the public will experience only several years of misery.

Slain cop's brother killed

Lee

A slain Chicago police officer's brother, one of two men shot Sunday morning on a South Side street, has died, officials said.

The man, Steven Lee, 32, of the 8900 block of South Eggleston Avenue, was pronounced dead at Stroger Hospital, according to the Cook County medical examiner's office. Lee is the brother of Chicago Police Officer Eric Lee, who was killed in an Englewood alley in 2001 while he was on duty, according to sources and records. Sunday's shooting occurred in the 8100 block of South Ingleside Avenue in East Chatham, police said.

North Side collision hurts several

Seven people were hurt, four critically, in an early-morning crash Sunday on the North Side, according to officials. Six people, three in critical condition, were taken to Advocate Illinois Masonic Medical Center; another person in critical condition was taken to Northwestern Memorial Hospital, said Larry Langford, a Chicago Fire Department spokesman. The driver of an Audi was trying to turn left onto Western Avenue when it was hit by a Lexus sedan at Irving Park Road, said Chicago Police Officer Robert Perez, a police spokesman. Police arrived about 4:20 a.m., he said, and determined the Audi's driver failed to yield to oncoming traffic.

Chicago-based survivors group heading to Rome

A day after the pope issued an apology to victims of sexual abuse by Catholic clergy in Ireland, leaders from a Chicago-based group for survivors of church sexual abuse left for Europe on Sunday to meet with victims, criticize Vatican officials and urge independent investigations into church sex crimes. "That's why we're going now. We're extremely concerned about what's coming out of Rome," said Barbara Blaine, president of the Survivors Network of those Abused by Priests, before she left for Munich on Sunday. "We've been hearing from so many victims from across the globe. We're going to be meeting with some of the survivors and advocates. We're hoping to possibly meet with government officials as well."

Metra equipment to cost $100 million

Metra plans to spend $100 million to install a high-tech system that would keep trains from colliding or prevent a distracted engineer from speeding through a warning signal to slow down or stop.

Such a safety system would have overridden the engineer's error that caused the September 2005 derailment of a Metra train, killing two women and injuring 117 others on Chicago's South Side, federal officials said.

The technology, they say, also could have prevented a 2008 commuter-freight train collision in Los Angeles that killed 25 people. The Metrolink commuter train's engineer was text-messaging when he ran a red signal and the train collided with a freight train at a combined speed of more than 80 miles per hour.

That crash prompted Congress a month later to pass a law requiring large railroads to install the system, known as positive train control, or PTC, by 2015.

PTC is a complex system of computers, GPS devices, radios and other communications equipment intended to take over when a train is approaching another train.

In an emergency, the system also could override an engineer who may be distracted or otherwise miss or ignore a warning signal to slow down, such as when a train crosses a switch or a track crossover, or when it exceeds the speed limit.

Metra officials said Friday that they expect to have the system running sooner than 2015.

"I think we're ahead of the curve," Metra Executive Director Phil Pagano said.

Critics say, however, that rail lines should have installed such systems long ago. The National Transportation Safety Board called for positive train control as far back as 1990.

The NTSB cited the lack of such a system in the deadly crash on Metra's Rock Island line in 2005, the second such derailment on the same line. In December 2006, the safety agency issued an urgent recommendation to Metra to install an automatic system to warn engineers.

Suspect in 1994 crash arrested

A man accused in the drunken-driving deaths of two 17-year-old girls in Poland escaped from a hospital there after the 1994 crash, fled his homeland and hid for nearly 15 years in Chicago.

The past caught up to Andrezej Piotrowicz, 35, in November 2009, when U.S. marshals arrested him after being tipped off by Polish authorities who tracked him to a brick home in Chicago's Belmont Heights, where he was living with his sister and elderly mother.

An extradition hearing was held in January, and a federal judge is expected to rule soon on Poland's request. The ultimate decision will be made by the U.S. State Department.

The arrest shocked Piotrowicz's bosses and co-workers at an Elk Grove Village precision machining firm, where he was employed for 10 years. He was described as a kind, talented operator who worked 60-hour weeks. He speaks only Polish.

"We're not sure what exactly happened. It's kind of a big surprise," said Joe Sowa, manager of L&W Tool and Screw Machine Corp. "He's very hard-working, always courteous, overall just a very good man."

According to court records, Piotrowicz, then 20, was drunk and speeding when his car slammed into a tree. Two passengers, Patrycja Kaczmarczyk and Malgorzata Osiak, were killed.

Muslim, Arab leaders reach out for census

By some counts, there are about 600,000 Muslim and Arab Americans living in greater Chicago. Other estimates put the number closer to 250,000.

No one knows for sure, which is why on Sunday, Muslim leaders encouraged Muslims in the Chicago area to participate in the 2010 census, so they can have an official count.

"If we keep isolated, no one will know about us," said Yousif Marei, president of the Islamic and Arab Community Service Office in Albany Park. "It is time for us to let them know who we are."

Muslim and Arab leaders have had to quell concerns within the community that personal information relayed on the census may be used to track people as part of anti-terrorist measures.

"It is not a spying instrument from the government," said Abbul Hijjawi, 76, a retired college educator who lives on the North Side. "We should not fear the process, because we are not a threat to the country."

Massacre remembered

1 JOHANNESBURG Family members of victims raised flowers to the sky and placed them on gravestones Sunday as mourners sang songs from the anti-apartheid struggle to mark the 50th anniversary of a massacre that drew world condemnation.

Others used the Sharpeville massacre anniversary to highlight the inequalities that remain in the township a half century later, including poor delivery of electricity and running water.

At an early morning prayer meeting in Sharpeville's Roman Catholic Church, an impassioned congregation raised their voices in song in the stained glass dawn light.

"All we could see were people falling down. It was like a storm ... bullets tearing their clothes," the Rev. Mary Senkhane recalled of her own experience on that day 50 years ago.

Police officers killed 69 black South Africans in Sharpeville, where people had gathered to protest the pass books that the white apartheid government required them to carry at all times. Police shot demonstrators including women and children as they ran away.

Botox in Baghdad

2 BAGHDAD Dr. Abbas al-Sahan's patient wasn't a war victim. She didn't have a scar that needed cosmetic surgery. All she wanted was a cute nose. And she got it.

Speaking after the surgery, with bandages and swelling gone, Sarah Saad Abdul-Hameed, 23, was ecstatic. Friends who visited "were surprised with the change in my face," she said. "They compared my nose to Nicole Kidman's!"

Even in the worst spasms of violence that followed the 2003 U.S.-led invasion, cosmetic surgery didn't go out of style. Now, as the country has quieted down, nose jobs, Botox and liposuction are all the rage.

Al-Sahan, one of Baghdad's premier plastic surgeons, said he averages about 20 cosmetic surgeries a week—70 percent on women. During the height of the fighting, reconstructive surgery for the wounded made up the bulk of his practice, but now most of it is cosmetics unrelated to the war, he said.

"When there's a good security situation and good economic improvement of the country, the work will grow," he said.

Interest in plastic surgery has blossomed since the fall of Saddam Hussein's dictatorship, and the end of economic sanctions that isolated Iraqis from the influences and pop culture of the outside world. Also, doctors who fled the violence are trickling back.

But availability of cosmetic surgery is limited—al-Sahan says fewer than half a dozen cosmetic surgeons operate in the country—and patients have to provide their own Botox or silicone.

Sarah Saad Abdul-Hameed speaks moments before her rhinoplasty surgery in Baghdad. She said her friends compared her new nose to Nicole Kidman's. APPHOTO

Al-Sahan's clinic in the upscale Mansour neighborhood, with its worn sofas and stairwell smelling of cats, hardly evokes "Nip/Tuck," the American TV show about high-end cosmetic surgery.

The cosmetic surgeries tend to be their bigger earners because patients pay cash—around $600 for a nose job. Breast augmentation costs $1,200, and clients must import the silicone from abroad. Botox, injected to relax muscles and head off wrinkles, can be found in Iraqi pharmacies.

Red River hits crest

6 The Red River has crested in Fargo, N.D., and begun to fall without doing major damage. The National Weather Service says the river topped out at just under 37 feet, or 19 feet over flood stage Sunday.

More snow was falling Sunday as part of a powerful storm blowing through Oklahoma and the southern Plains. The National Weather Service said there was moderate to heavy snow across northeast Oklahoma and northwest Arkansas, with some places reporting 8 to 12 inches of snow.

Sugar coated

Beat-up Big Ten shows it has some bite left

And then there were three. Of the four Big Ten teams in second-round NCAA tournament action Sunday, three survived to savor the thrill of the Sweet 16 — two in heart-stopping fashion. And the other? Let's just say that team probably would rather eat rocks than be left with such a bitter aftertaste.

Wisconsin

Cornell clearly loves kicking bullies in the shins, and Wisconsin is the 12th-seeded Big Red's latest victim of little-guy retribution.

The Ivy League champions were the better team early in building a double-digit lead less than four minutes into the game, withstood one surge by the Badgers late in the first half and then dominated the rest of the way to oust fourth-seeded Wisconsin (24-9), 87-69, in the second round of the East Region.

The upstart Big Red (29-4) will take on top-seeded Kentucky in the East Region semifinals Thursday night in Syracuse, N.Y. MCT

Ohio State

Evan Turner shook off one of the worst shooting nights of his career by coming within an assist and a rebound of his third triple-double of the season, lifting Ohio State to a 75-66 victory over sloppy Georgia Tech on Sunday in Milwaukee. Turner finished with 24 points.

"The better he plays," Ohio State coach Thad Matta said, "the better we play."

The deeper into the tournament the Buckeyes (29-7) play, too. With No. 1 Kansas, No. 3 Georgetown and No. 4 Maryland all eliminated, Ohio State has its best chance of returning to the Final Four since Greg Oden and Mike Conley, Jr. took the Buckeyes there in 2007. Ohio State faces sixth-seeded Tennessee on Friday in a Midwest Regional semifinal.

AP

Michigan State

The Spartans are hobbled, but after Sunday, Maryland is really hurting.

Korie Lucious hit a 3-pointer at the buzzer to cap a frenetic finish and give injury-depleted

Michigan State, which lost star guard Kalin Lucas, a victory over Maryland.

The Spartans blew a 16-point lead in the second half. Greivis Vasquez put fourth-seeded Maryland (24-9) ahead 83-82 with 6 seconds left, but Michigan State pushed the ball up the floor and Lucious, filling in for Lucas, drained a 3 from the top of the key, setting off a wild celebration by the Spartans.

No. 5 seed Michigan State (26-8) advances to play ninth-seeded Northern Iowa on Friday in the Midwest Regional semifinals in St. Louis. AP

Purdue

Robbie Hummel's out with a knee injury, but somehow Purdue keeps on chugging without its best player.

Chris Kramer's drive past one defender and layup over another 6 inches taller than him with 4.2 seconds remaining in overtime sent fourth-seeded Purdue into the regional semifinals with a bruising 63-61 victory in overtime over No. 5 Texas A&M.

BJ. Holmes got a final, frantic chance to win the game for Texas A&M with a rushed 3-point try from in front of his bench at the buzzer, but it hit short on the rim to ensure a sixth regional appearance in 12 NCAA tournaments dating to 1994 for Purdue (29-5).

Kramer led the Boilermakers with 17 points and seven rebounds; they will play top-seeded Duke in the next round. AP

THE WHIZZER CHALLENGE

Partly upset

So this dancing thing isn't as easy as it looks. Er, I mean, I'm lulling you readers into a false sense of security for when I come back with my Final Four picks later this week. For now, here's how I fared in prognosticating the first weekend:

JUST LIKE FIDO ASTAIRE

Michigan St.
I'm still buzzing over the finish against Maryland.

Ohio St.
Buckeyes' Evan Turner awakens just in time.

Syracuse
No one's come close to putting the squeeze on the Orange yet.

Butler
I saw no reason to doubt these Bulldogs early in the tournament.

Kansas St.
It's easy to pull for the Wildcats' Jacob Pullen and his 34 points against BYU.

Kentucky
UK gets first win by 29 and second by 30. Yawn.

Cornell
These Ivy Leaguers are smarter than the average Wisconsin Badger.

West Virginia
The Mountaineers' defense is as rugged as my fur is cuddly.

Duke
Northbrook's Jon Scheyer and his teammates knew when to bear down against Cal.

Prediction: Kansas
Reality: Northern Iowa.

End of the line at Kansas for Chicago product Sherron Collins.

Prediction: Georgetown
Reality: Tennessee.
I volunteer for a do-over on this one.

Prediction: Siena
Reality: Purdue.
Yeah, I got burnt by Siena—and the Boilermakers.

Prediction: Notre Dame
Reality: Baylor.
Luck of the Irish, my right paw.

Prediction: Villanova
Reality: St. Mary's.
The Gaels pulled a surprise, and I kinda blew this one.

Prediction: New Mexico
Reality: Washington.
If I had to be wrong, at least it's the Huskies who made it through.

Prediction: Pittsburgh
Reality: Xavier.
Did the Musketeers use their swords? So unfair.

Two Tiger Woods interviews aired Sunday night on the Golf Channel and ESPN. AP

TIGER: IT'S ALL ON ME

Woods faces questions but surrenders few details

Associated Press

Tiger Woods acknowledged "living a lie," saying he alone was responsible for the sex scandal that caused his downfall and that no one in his inner circle was aware of his misdeeds.

"It was all me. I'm the one who did it. I'm the one who acted the way I acted. No one knew what was going on when it was going on," Woods told the Golf Channel in one of two interviews Sunday. A second one aired on ESPN.

"I'm sure if more people would have known in my inner circle, they would have stopped it or tried to put a stop to it. But I kept it all to myself," he said.

Answering questions on camera for the first time since his early-morning car crash in November, Woods again provided few details about the crash, his marriage, his stint in a rehabilitation clinic or much of his private life.

"A lot of ugly things have happened. ... I've done some pretty bad things in my life," he told ESPN.

Woods also acknowledged more fully than in any of his previous statements that the public ridicule had caused him shame.

"It was hurtful, but then again, you know what? I did it," he told the Golf Channel. "And I'm the one who did those things. And looking back on it now, with a more clear head, I get it. I can understand why people would say those things. Because you know what? It was disgusting behavior."

Manager Ozzie Guillen said the White Sox aren't set on carrying 12 pitchers, a decision that will be answered by the health of Bobby Jenks. Jenks will pitch Monday against the Royals; he expressed confidence after an MRI exam Saturday revealed mild irritation in his right calf. "I'll be ready for Opening Day," Jenks said Sunday.

Chicago native and former NBA player Antoine Walker, who has creditors pursuing him for a mountain of debt, scoffs at the notion he emulated Michael Jordan at casinos. "I would never bet what MJ bet," Walker told espn.com. "Michael would have smacked the [crap] out of me if I did that."

Twins closer Joe Nathan was hoping for a miracle. He didn't get it, and he will indeed miss the 2010 season because of a right elbow injury that will require surgery. Nathan, who leads the major leagues with 246 saves since 2004, made the decision after playing catch with pitching coach Rick Anderson for 10 minutes.

Bloom boom

New bars, celeb-chef openings, festivals and outdoor dining (finally!) welcome spring

By Metromix Staff

Spring can wake up our winter-laden Chicago in more ways than repopulating lakefront running paths. Here to prove it are these blossoming new bars and restaurants, just-released outdoor-concert lineups, and yes, the first crop of festivals of the season.

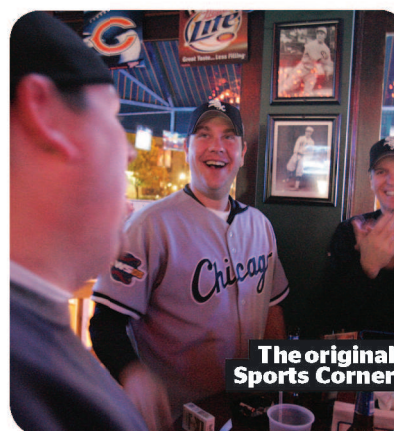

Big Star tacos

OUTDOOR DINING

In Wicker Park, Big Star (1531 N. Damen Ave.) fills the void left by Pontiac's closing with its 120-seat front beer garden (or beer-bourbon-tequila garden, to be precise). Downtown, Epic (112 W. Hubbard St.) will debut a 3,000-square-foot roof-deck lounge. Mag Mile diners also get two new outdoor oases when the just-opened M Burger (161 E. Huron St.) rolls out about 40 sidewalk seats, and swine-and-wine sensation the Purple Pig (500 N. Michigan Ave.) debuts alfresco seating for 50 as early as late April.

—M. KATHLEEN PRATT, DINING PRODUCER

BAR OPENINGS

Just in time for baseball season, the bulldozed-then-rebuilt Sports Corner (956 W. Addison St.) in Wrigleyville aims to open April 6, showing off two floors of bar space and a rooftop deck. Not far behind, North Center's homage to food-and-booze pairings, Fountainhead (1968-70 W. Montrose Ave.), will debut in mid-to-late April with a beer program from Phil Kuhl, aka the Beer Dude, formerly of Sheffield's Beer School. The month of May brings Nice Slice Pizza Bar (2210 N. California Ave.), the latest project from the owners of funky Pilsen hangout Simone's Bar.

—LISA ARNETT, NIGHTLIFE PRODUCER

FESTIVALS

Toast the season's start at Chicago Mayfest (May 21-23) in a Lakeview lot at Barry and Ashland avenues. Next, stretch your legs in Wicker Park at the Do Division Street Fest and Sidewalk Sale (June 5-6, right) along a 10-block stretch of the bar-lined street between Ashland Avenue and Leavitt Street. Sneak in more rounds of people-watching and sangria-drinking at the 45th annual Andersonville Midsommarfest (June 12-13) at Foster Avenue and Clark Street.

—REBECCA PALMORE, EVENTS PRODUCER

RESTAURANT OPENINGS

We couldn't think of a more appropriate kickoff to spring's new restaurants than Sable Kitchen & Bar (505 N. State St.), opening Wednesday with a highly seasonal mindset. Anticipated openings Graham Elliot Bowles' (right) Grahamwich (615 N. State St.) and Stephanie Izard's Girl & the Goat (809 W. Randolph St.) likely will continue to keep us in suspense until early June, but neighborhood openings should tide us over till then. Pork Shoppe (2755 W. Belmont Ave.), an organic-minded barbecue spot in Avondale, is aiming for an April debut, and casual Japanese eateries Masu Izakaya (1969 N. Halsted St.) and Arami (1829 W. Chicago Ave.), hope to open in late March and April, respectively.

—M. KATHLEEN PRATT, DINING PRODUCER

MUSIC

Listen up: Your ears shouldn't miss Thom Yorke's new band Atoms For Peace (April 10-11 at Aragon, sold out) or live performances by the cast of "Glee" (May 25-26 at Rosemont Theatre). Want something cheaper? Head to the free Monday music series at Millennium Park, featuring Hum (May 31) and She & Him (June 7, below). Don't forget about Ravinia; our favorite first big act is Steve Martin and the Steep Canyon Rangers (June 12). —MATT PAIS, MUSIC PRODUCER

Power Hour

Danny Chaimson from Danny Chaimson and The 11th Hour wanted to see his Chicago band in RedEye and Metromix, so he answered our Chi-Tunes questionnaire at metromix.com/music. Do the same and your band could be next!

Describe your sound in five words or less.

Vintage keyboard driven rock 'n' roll

Tell us something random about the band.

One night in L.A. while playing at the Roxy, Slash came out from the crowd unannounced and sat in on my song "Raise 'Em Up" and ripped an incredibly tasteful guitar solo. I don't know how significant that is, but it is definitely awesome.

Whom would you want to work with, and whom would you never work with? Why?

I'd love to work with Norah Jones. I feel like we'd write some badass songs together. She's just so talented and cool. I wouldn't want to work with Sammy Hagar. I'm sure the feeling's mutual.

If the band was a '90s sitcom character, whom would it be and why?

Lisa Turtle from "Saved By The Bell." Very personable, competent and fun—yet we fly just under the radar.

Lower Back Pain?

Are You or Someone You Know Suffering From Lower Back Pain?

Northwestern University is seeking volunteers who have lower back pain in order to determine where the pain is recognized in the brain. Participants will also be evaluated to determine why pain goes away for some people while it remains for others. This is a 12 month study consisting of 1 visit at the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago and 5 MRI scans at Northwestern Memorial Hospital's Olson Pavilion. All visits will take place in downtown Chicago.

Eligible participants must:

- Be 18 years or older
- Have a history of lower back pain which began 4-16 weeks ago with pain radiating into the buttocks or legs
- Be able to undergo a MRI (no pacemakers, metallic implants, or spinal implants)

Please call 312-503-3181 for more information on how you can take part in this research study.

It's back.

Yes, after a year away, RedEye's Best TV Character Tournament launches today to find the heir to 2008 champ Sir Guy of Gisborne (Richard Armitage) from BBC America's "Robin Hood" and 2007 winner Lt. Kara "Starbuck" Thrace (Katee Sackhoff) from Syfy's "Battlestar Galactica."

After weeks—no months—of debating, asking readers, Twitter followers, RedEye staffers and other critics, I've come up with a list of 32 scary, funny or neurotic, but all brilliant, characters currently on TV.

Believe me, it wasn't easy. One new rule this time: I chose just one character per series, which meant mini-tournaments to narrow the fields among such shows as "Lost," "Stargate Universe" and "30 Rock." I know I've left out some amazing characters, but I think the 32 I've chosen are pretty awesome.

You have until noon Friday to vote in the first round before a winner is declared and we move on to the Sweet 16 the following Monday. You can vote at redeyechicago.com/showpatrol.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! Aries

March 21-April 19
Venus is increasing the chances that you will turn into a stalker. Your desire for that certain someone is getting out of control, though you know that the relationship is doomed. Try not to go all "Fatal Attraction" on your honey, OK?

Taurus April 20-May 20

All you want to do is lay back and let your lover slather you in hot oils, fragrant lotions or chocolate sauce. You're in the mood to be spoiled from head to toe. A sensual moon is increasing your need for nurturing and rubbing.

Gemini May 21-June 21

You have a mad crush on someone who is totally unsuitable and/or unstable. You're in love with your married and excessively religious college professor. You're in lust with that underage neighbor. Neptune says cut it out, already.

Cancer June 22-July 22

As a shy Water sign, you hate it when your partner asks you how you feel. "Um, fine," is your usual reply, even when the sky is falling, you've lost your job and you're worried about that mole that recently changed colors. Try something radical this week. Tell the truth.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

An exhibitionist sun is encouraging you to let it all hang out. So your neighbors suspect you've had a few threesomes going on. They're right. Why hide them? Or maybe your co-workers have found out about your torrid affair with your married friend. So what?

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Jupiter is giving you a case of existential nausea. You're worried that you're living in the wrong location, working at the wrong career and dating the wrong person. The bad news? One of these assumptions is correct.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

Sometimes you can be a little too casual about sex. It might be just a fling for you, but your lover could be falling for you, big-time. Don't toy with his or her affections. Be open about your intentions instead of leading somebody on.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

Uranus, the rude-sounding planet, is inspiring you to get a little wild. It could be time to break out the handcuffs and the soft rope. Or maybe you need to get a fresh copy of the Kama Sutra and try out some new poses.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

Don't push your way into someone's life when you might not be wanted. If that hottie says he's engaged to someone, believe him. If that cutie explains that she's happily married, trust that she's telling you the truth.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

You may be attracted to someone when you least expect it. Flirty Venus is arranging a cosmic meeting. You could have an amusing chat with a new co-worker or discover you have much in common with a fellow train passenger.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

You're all talk but zero action. You've been flirting with someone for weeks, maybe months, and that person is getting his or her hopes up about you. Meanwhile, you breeze through life, ignoring this person's sexual signals. Pay attention.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

Water signs tend to avoid conflict. But once in a while, you become attracted to one of those drama kings or queens who has a commanding, arrogant manner—even though you know it never will work out. The moon says get over it.

Star power shines bright at the Shrine

about last night

larroyave
@tribune.com

GOT A TIP?

Do you have a hot tip on a celebrity sighting in Chicago? E-mail Luis or tweet him @luisarroyave.

There were high expectations surrounding The BlackOut party at The Shrine, but that's nothing new when LeBron James is involved. Everywhere James, the party's host, goes suddenly becomes the place to be, and Thursday night, that place was in the South Loop.

Long lines to get in? Check. Athletes towering over club patrons? Check. Scantily clad groupies? Check. Check.

Add in a midnight appearance by James' buddy Jay-Z (who performed at the United Center that night), rapper Young Jeezy, Bulls All-Star Derrick Rose and the newest Bears star, Julius Peppers, and you had the sort of party usually reserved for the Super Bowl or NBA All-Star weekend.

James was in town to face the Bulls at the United Center on Friday, which is why he and his Cavs' teammates Antawn Jamison, Anderson Varejao, Delonte West and Daniel Green were able to take part in the Hennessy Black-sponsored party.

Was Bulls forward Hakim Warrick tempted to buy James, the reigning NBA MVP, a few drinks to make sure he wasn't in top form the next night?

"The way we're banged up right now, I'll do whatever I can," Warrick joked. "I might slip him a few shots tonight."

Other notable guests include speed skater Shani Davis, who brought his gold medal (like you wouldn't do the same thing), ex-Bear Tank Johnson, model/actress Melyssa Ford and Dr. Ian Smith of VH1's "Celebrity Fit Club," who told me James and Kobe Bryant throw the best parties.

"They know how to play hard," Smith said, "but they party hard too."

SXSW ends with a bang

Hilton

South by Southwest drew to a close Saturday night with a tribute to the late Alex Chilton of Big Star and with Perez Hilton's annual One Night in Austin party. Those who couldn't get in to the wild Hilton fest grew rowdy and spent the night tweeting hateful messages, billboard.com reports. Inside, Macy Gray got the night going with a cover of Arcade Fire's "Wake Up" and her own songs. Later, Snoop Dogg had the crowd jumping to a selection of his hits.

Rockin' the bathroom

He may not have started the piano improv meme, but Ben Folds (above) brought it to another level this weekend. Folds treated fans at his concert in Charlotte to a tribute to the Chatroulette piano improv guy by breaking out the webcam and playing along to whomever popped up. The singer has posted video from the concert on YouTube. Folds even improvised a number about a guy sitting on the toilet.

James feels the need for speed

Jesse James evaded paparazzi on a 90-mph escape run down California's Pacific Coast Highway, enonline.com reports. James' eldest daughter also called police to their home because of the presence of media on the property. Still no Sandra Bullock sightings.

Rosie plots return

Is Rosie O'Donnell (left) trying to fill Oprah's shoes? According to thr.com, O'Donnell will launch a syndicated daytime talk show in fall 2011—when Winfrey has said she will pull the plug on her longtime show. The "Rosie O'Donnell Show" ran for six years.

DIGIT

$34.5 million

That's how much money "Alice in Wonderland" took in to remain the No. 1 movie for a third straight weekend. "Diary of a Wimpy Kid" opened at No. 2 with $21.8 million. Debuting at No. 3 was "The Bounty Hunter" with $21 million.
